

Hello all,

I joined this chat with some initial ambivalence. I appreciate much of what our current board has accomplished - for example, I fully support the decision to upgrade Drini's apartment, which I thought was well handled. At the same time, I had a nagging sense that some board members had become entrenched, and that it was starting to affect their leadership.

That initial ambivalence is now gone. After everything I've seen, I'm convinced it's time for new leadership. I strongly urge everyone on this chat to sign the alternate slate's proxy if you haven't already, and to encourage others to do the same.

To explain my shift, as one example let me share my direct experience with the "nominating committee" process. It illustrates why its recommendations should not be taken too seriously.

Here's what happened: In April, I responded to the call for nominations to serve on the nominating committee. A gentleman on this chat (whom I still owe a coffee!) reached out for a friendly conversation, and I agreed to an interview with the other co-chair. Shortly after, I was told the interviewer had resigned and the process was being reconfigured. I was asked to resubmit my candidacy with a new set of questions - which I did. Immediately after, I was told those questions were wrong and given yet another set - which I also completed.

Then, silence. Last week I followed up, noting the need for sufficient time for candidates to submit nominations and be vetted. No reply. I followed up again five days later and was told I'd hear back soon. Ultimately, I learned via mass email that a "random process" had been used and I was not selected. No one contacted me directly.

We're now told that candidates have just 10 days to submit a 9-page nomination packet and must be available for in-person interviews during a single week at month's end. This is unreasonable and unjustified. If the nominating committee itself was indeed selected randomly, that could have been done in minutes. There's no excuse for the long delay in announcing its members, nor for imposing such a compressed schedule on the nominees.

Additionally, requiring in-person interviews in 2026 is simply outdated. People who are unable to manage a basic Zoom call may not be well-suited for board or committee service.

I believe our new candidates should submit their paperwork if they have the time and interest. But I encourage everyone to read this account and form your own judgment. Whatever emerges from this nominating committee should not influence your decision. The way the committee was set up was haphazard, bordering on comical; there is little reason to expect a fair or thorough vetting from a body that was created in this way and that is allotted so very little time for its own work.

I'm deeply grateful to Jon, Rob, and everyone else willing to donate their valuable time to serve on a new board. Please consider signing the proxy that empowers the alternate slate to bypass this flawed process if necessary. I certainly have.

Thank you,

Eyal Shemesh 17B
